Notes from Mock-up Review

Creative Director: Sara Berman

Designer/Developer: Alex Ngo

I like the vibrant colors that you picked, and I think they could work well for the opening page but not for the entire website. For the intro page I was thinking of Amy Poehler, in all capitals, taking up the majority of the screen. I also want this text to be interactive as in color changing, not spinning around. Maybe it goes from being filled in to not when hovered over? I also want the website to work on different pages and not just on one continuous scroll. There should be a bar that continues on each page so one can easily navigate from screen to screen. The pictures on each page should be related to what the text is saying. For example, in the SNL section put pictures of Poehler performing on the show. I was also thinking that when scrolling over the images there is a sheer overlay and the caption. I like the font that you chose but I prefer all capitals for headers and titles. I would also like to see a mockup with the actual text and pictures to get a better sense of what it will look like.
